

MULTIMEDIA

Repetitive behaviors and autism

BY EMMA BRYCE

4 SEPTEMBER 2020

Repetitive behaviors are one of autism's core features and can be sensory or motor based, such as hand-flapping, or more cognitive in nature, such as intensely focused interests. Autistic people may engage in repetitive behaviors as a way to relieve anxiety or for fun — and for this reason, such behaviors deserve careful management.